31.	Governance, Citizens, and the Next Generation of Public Administration	The evolution of the New Public Management movement has increased pressure on state bureaucracies to become more responsive to citizens as clients. Without a doubt, this is an important advance in contemporary public administration, which finds itself struggling in an ultra dynamic marketplace. However, together with such a welcome change in theory building and in practical culture reconstruction, modern societies still confront a growth in citizens' passivism; they tend to favor the easy chair of the customer over the sweat and turmoil of participatory involvement. 		and not-for-profit agencies alongside government bodies. Partnerships are frequently contrasted with competitive markets and bureaucratic hierarchies. A more complex reality is revealed once partnerships as an organizational form are distinguished from networks as a mode of social co-ordination or governance.	Training and Science Development
33.	Public Choice a different way to understand Public Administration	In November 1963, a number of economists and a sprinkling of other social scientists were invited by James Buchanan and Gordon Tullock to explore a community of interest in the study of nonmarket decision making. That conference was reported in PAR as "Developments in the 'No-Name' Fields of Public Administration." A shared interest prevailed regarding the application of economic reasoning to "collective," "political" or "social" decision making, but no consensus developed on the choice of a name to characterize those interests. In December 1967 the decision was taken to form a Public Choice Society	Prof. Dr. Jakob Staubmann Prof. for Management and HR, Chairman of the European Society for Training and Science Development	5	180	50	130
34.	Paradigms of Public Administration	"Paradigm" no doubt is an overworked word. Nevertheless, it is a useful one because there is no other term that conveys the concept of a field's self-identity and the changing dynamics of that identity. Paradigmatic questions are of especial significance in public administration	Prof. Dr. Jakob Staubmann Prof. for Management and HR, Chairman of the European Society for Training and Science Development	5	180	50	130

35.	Ethics and Management in the public sector	WHY SHOULD WE BE CONCERNED WITH ETHICS? This might seem a trite question. ‘Of course we should be concerned with ethics’ you might respond. However, it seems to us that if this was so obvious, why is it that we read in the newspapers every day about a corrupt public official in this part of the world, or a rigged election in that part of the world? As much as we might like to think that such things never happen in our own countries, they do and will continue to do so.	Prof. Dr. Jakob Staubmann Prof. for Management and HR, Chairman of the European Society for Training and Science Development	5	180	50	130
36.	Virtual Neighborhoods and E-Government: A Case Study Comparison	The potential of GIS oriented neighborhood websites in the Netherlands will be researched. This new way of location based e-government will be analyzed by conducting four case studies in which neighborhood websites hold a central position. Relevant questions include to what degree these websites improve service delivery on the side of the government and to what degree the position of citizens is Strengthened and whether they are pleased with the website and with the results. Attention will be paid to critical factors for success when designing the website but also while implementing the website and when the website is running. This will be done in terms of service delivery, closing of the gap between Government and citizens	Prof. Dr. Jakob Staubmann Prof. for Management and HR, Chairman of the European Society for Training and Science Development	5	180	50	130 and the strength of the position of citizens. Finally, we will answer the question on how GIS oriented neighborhood websites can be implemented so they have the highest potential by citizen satisfaction
